Info About Project

The main idea behind this project is to show how photography and videos can be used for learning about other cultures and how we can break some of the stereotypes that we have through this type of art.

We want to encourage intercultural understanding within young people through working on the competences needed for practicing intercultural dialogue.

This project is for everyone, regardless of language skills, since photography is a method of expression, this is something that a large spectrum of young people can engage in, and is a good way to empower many young people through non-verbal communication. We believe that one photo is worth a thousand words and that is why we gave the name to our project "A Thousand Words,,.

The original plan was to organize residential exchange during the project, but because of pandemic we decided to organize it online instead.

Objectives:

Creating a space for sharing ideas, views and opinions with young people from different cultures.
